thanks for the compliment. that particular set is being sent to the sylvania company. i found an old pamphlet of theirs " 40 ways to use diodes". experiment 1 is the schem for a loose coupled radio. they are observing the 100th anniversary of the company. I am asking permission to have a few of the articles reprinted in the xtal society's newsletter. so to emphisise that the art and technology are still in use i am sending the radio and pamphlet to their archivist to use (if desired) in their anniversary display.

i doubt if it will cause them to start remanufacturing diodes, but it will say we did appreciate what they did for the field.

Hi Group

I wonder if the new service that Yahoo is offering in letting us receive E-Mail of the post has anything to do with the post problem? Could it be that while the E-Mail of the post is being sent to all of us, that the post is not able to be seen?

Welcome, old ferrends. Here is a place where we can ferret about as much as we like, and not need to frret about the consequences.

Sorry, I needed to get THAT bit of nonsense out of my system. John, is it possible to change the 'secondary' title of the forum? How about 'Secondary storage space for unwanted levity'?

Only kidding. I'd like to pose a question to Norf:

How SHOULD I maintain my anvil?

Have a good weekend, chaps. Any decision you chaps make vis-a-vis name of new club, etc. is okay with me. Limited interaction may be possible from my home over the next two days.

Hello All,
I'm here too. Gee, It's nice to know that I really can transport myself in cyberspace. It seems a little more relaxed here. A refreshing watering hole in the cyber desert. I was starting to feel that I should wear a coat and tie to check in at the stuffy old "Official Board Meeting" place. Years ago, I retired to get away from such stuff and have no need or desire to return to it. I would rather go play in the sun. Life is too short to do anything else. I can foresee my contributions there declining. Perhaps those left will enjoy the sound of silence. I leave them in peace.

Richard:
Except for some hard feelings, I think everything worked out for the best. We can discuss technical matters on the Crystal Set Radio Club and kick back on the Think Tank. It makes it much easier to look at past posts for something you vaguely remember if all the goofing off is somewhere else. Trouble is, there seem to be three clubs, this one the Crystal Set Radio Club, and the think tank. (and the Ferrite Core, of course.)

Paul was pretty mild, if you compare the Crystal Set Radio Club to some of the popular ham radio/boatanchor oriented reflectors.

A friend called someone "clueless" on the Boatanchor reflector, and was promptly disbarred. He had to wait for a few weeks and beg forgiveness before he was reinstated. He currently is a frequent contributor, but refrains from such comments.

Ads are typically discouraged, except for occasional personal items. Another person who had a surplus electronic business posted frequent ads, which closely resembled his on-line catalog. Someone brought up this fact to the moderator, and the poster was promptly tossed off - forever. Think it was the Glowbugs reflector. I went off-topic with a couple of others on Glowbugs, and was rebuked (topic, not me personally).

Well, I have rambled on more than I should have.

Jim,
There does seem to be a sudden proliferation of spin-off clubs. The "Crystal Set Club" and "Think Tank" are good ways to separate the technical information while allowing a free ranging dialog between members. Perhaps the founder of the "Archive" could designate a specific use for that site to avoid mail box confusion. Until recently, I was unaware that a separate (private?) "Ferrite Core Club" existed. Do you belong? Do you know anyone who does? Is it super secret? What is posted there? Why is it such a mystery? Is it part of area 51? Will I suddenly disappear from the radar screen for asking these questions?
If so, please forget I asked. Things done in secret are probably not very nice anyway.

OK,Dr.Whiz.I finally found the book on anvil maintenance.It says:
"If you mean to have a happy and well adjusted anvil,you should take it for long drives in the country,allowing its' point to point out of the window.Failure to do this will result in a depressed anvil that will sulk in a dark corner of the shop,budging from its'station only an inch or two in the course of a year...."

"In recent years it has come to the attention of 'Anvil Rights Activists'that people have been beating their anvils.After many protests and demonstrations on their part,it is now advised,that,anyone desiring to remain politically correct,should refrain from said practice.This,also,helps to improve the disposition of your anvil."

I don't know where this is goin' and it's getting pretty silly even for me.norf

Richard/Phil: The Ferrite Core was the original Yahoo crystal set club. It was inadvertently converted to a private club a few months after starting. Apparently, converting back wasn't possible, so the Crystal Set Radio Club was started. The Ferrite Core was not terminated, but it is much less active. Contest topics seem to be the most common post. No spook programs involved here, more like the "Archives", where it exists but is not mentioned much on the Crystal Set Radio Club. If you are interested in joining, contact Paul/Ferrite61. I'm sure he wouldn't object.

Glowbugs and Boatanchors are two reflectors devoted to older radio equipment, when equipment was typically big and heavy. The implication is the equipment is obsolete and the only real use is an anchor for a boat. If you are not familiar with reflectors, they are similar to a Yahoo club except you receive all post as emails. Topics include repairing, restoring, and using this equipment. I belong to about a dozen reflectors, and receive about 100 emails/day. I keep my head above water by using Eudora to filter messages to appropriate "mailboxes". Incidentally, there are reflectors covering almost every brand of ham radio equipment, DXing, antennas, SWLing, BCB dxing, etc. If you are interested, I'll send details on joining. If so, can you receive a Word file?

Guess I used another term that needs an explanation. I have worked in Aerospace almost my entire career, and many of the jobs were classified at various levels. At the highest levels, you could not even mention the project you were working on. This was awkward at times. For example, I attempted to contact a work friend, but could not find him in the company phone book. I met him one day at work, and said "thought you were working somewhere else, couldn't find you in the phone book". After a vague answer, I said "guess you are on a spook program". He didn't say no, and we discussed other things, like ham radio.

Thanks for the info and offer, Jim, but no, I'm not interested in receiving stuff by e-mail in this way.

The 'spook' program story reminds me of when I worked for Plessey, who were a big UK Ministry of Defence contractor at the time. Many people working there had signed the Official Secrets Act, but signing was an Official Secret. Hence, if asked if you had signed, the only legal answers were "No" or "I'm sorry, I'm not allowed to answer that question". Same thing, I guess.

Richard: Actually, downplaying the Ferrite Core has advantages. Essentially all technical posts go to the Crystal Set Radio Club instead of being split between two clubs, one of which requires you to enter your club alias and password daily. I may participate in threads on Ferrite Core, but never initiate one there. Another blow against duplication and unnecessary usage of passwords!

Owen: One story leads to another. While I was working, we needed to make tests at a super-secret microwave frequency, so secret it was whispered into my ear a long distance from anyone else. One of the thermistor mounts was damaged and sent to the vendor for repair. Calibration factor, a term roughly used to account for frequency response differences, was provided by the vendor for a number of test frequencies (whole numbers across the operating range). On the data sheet, someone had hand-written the secret frequency. We were horrified - how did this happen? We really couldn't ask the vendor since the frequency was so secret we couldn't mention the number. Security was called, and they started investigating. A fellow employee was suspected, since he always told me he knew where I was when I returned from the spook program area. I pointed out he could not be involved since the package was shipped from the vendor and he didn't know anybody there.
However, security's vigor started to drop after it was learned the program was being declassified and they were all being laid off. We never knew what happened. 73's

What was the saying? 'My work is so secret that even I don't know what I'm doing.'
My Dad and I have been in aerospace,too,but the fabrication end.He started on the B-17 in Tulsa;ended on the 747,I think it was,at LTV.I worked on the A-7d,myself during Vietnam abt.'69.Later on L-1011 at Murdock(now defunct division of Lockheed).Mostly worked for subcontractors for the last 20 yr.or so.Well,that's probably more than you wanted.
I heard about one of those secret deals at Murdock where a part was being made and the whole machine was surrounded by plywood.The only person the operator spoke to was generally just his relief man.
Once,the FBI came out cuz somebody was xeroxing dollar bills and running them through the coin changer,but I guess I can hardly call that any kind of breach of national security.(and,No.It wasn't me.) Norfdak

Some of the stuff I did was so compartmented that I had to read Aviation Week or the Washington Post to find out what it was. Got a lot easier when Ted Turner started up CNN - then I got it in real time. Once spent a very uncomfortable half hour in a secure vault being questioned by an intelligence security type.
Problem was, I didn't know if I knew anything, and he was not allowed to tell me what it was I might know about. In the end, I signed a paper agreeing not to divulge any information about it, whatever it was, and we declared victory and went to lunch. Finally read a book recently about what it was I didn't know about, and, sure enough, I hadn't known anything about it after all, which was a relief to me.

When I was working for Plessey in 1981 I got seconded onto an MoD project making infra-red detectors for the military. They wouldn't issue any kind of specification nor describe the top-secret application. All that happened was that we made a batch of devices, sent them to the MoD for testing, and they then came back to us telling us whether we had got 'warmer' or 'colder', like the kid's parlour game.

Eventually, we gleaned three facts: they wanted optimum detection at a wavelength of 2.06um (CO2 laser, as all physicists know); they wanted maximum sensitivity, irrespective of noise or response time; and they wanted the devices in pairs. This we could have done in six months, but operating their way we got five years money out of them. We casually mentioned these observations to an elderly colleague (Hugh Wright, author of several books on antenna design) and he replied immediately "Battlefield optical communications. Two-detector heterodyne system, works almost as a single-photon detector. 2.06um goes through smoke and fog." Problem solved.

For the last batch of devices, the two MoD scientists ran out of superlatives (because now we knew how to optimize them). To wind them up a bit, my boss casually asked them "And what does Professor Brown think of these devices?" (name somebody let slip during a telephone conversation). Atmosphere noticeably chills.

Reply: "What do you know about Professor Brown?"

Boss: "He's your boss isn't he? Has the final say?"

(Two MoD men literally get up from table silently, go into corner of room, and mutter, then return.)

MoD: "Professor Brown is our boss, but he doesn't have the final say. The final say comes from another level above him."

Boss: "And who would that be?"

MoD: "We have no idea".

And, of course, they meant it.

It seems a lot of us have had humorous experiences with classified work. I still can't talk about many of mine.
Remember the big flap about someone getting into serious trouble and being prosecuted by the government for exporting little miniature fast trigger switches, used in nuclear detonators, to foreign governments? Our government was very worried that they might be used by terrorists. At a recent local ham fest somebody had a large box full and was selling them for $5.00 each as souvenirs. We don't need to worry about ICBM's. They will probably deliver by UPS or Fed-Ex. with an attached Wal-Mart GPS to tell it when to detonate. So much for security.

honestly i love the free press, but how do these wacko's find the help wanted ads for radio stations. the level of intelligance would not even light up a dim bulb. do these stations troll the streets like moving companies and yell out "help wanted, 3.50 and hour and a free lunch"?????

In the old days, that actually happened. When I started work as an engineer at Douglas Aircraft in 1953, my boss was a sharp guy and everything I did, he could do better. One day, after finishing an assignment, I went to him for more work. He was not there. A day or so later, I was totally out of work and he still was not there so I asked his boss. I was told he no longer worked at Douglas. Friends said said two people came in, asked him to pack his personal belongings, stood on each side while he did so, and walked out with him. I never saw him again, but later rumors said he was repairing TV's somewhere. Incidentally, we were working on the DC-6 and nothing seemed to be classified in my area although I needed a clearance before actually working. Jim

39. The UltraLoop -- an antenna idea

Yahoo group: crystalsetradioclubarchive

From: ka8oqf
Topic: 1 Message: 39

This is (a) a rather long post (b) being posted on four boards -- commentary from anyone anywhere (even more than once) is welcome.

The subject is a major multi-turn loop antenna. It's a flat loop, more like a big radius widely spaced spiral. For purposes of this argument, we will use the word "loop".

It is rectangular in the width/length ratio of .62/1. It is not flat. It is bent in the center (like a book opened and lying face down) on an interior angle of 135 degrees (each side drops below the horizontal at about 23 degrees). The loop perimeter is 140 feet. The average height above the ground will be around 10 feet. If you haven't figured it out yet, it's the roof of my building.

I'm thinking of a 3-turn loop, 3 inch turn spacing, lying on the roof as described above. That gives me 420 feet or so of wire, which my calculator says is a quarter wave at 585kHz.

Query of the day:
Will this work?

If someone's looking for reference material or a place to get started in the crystal set world, may I kindly suggest the following.

Start here with these:
www.midnightscience.com

The Xtal Set Society website and bookstore

Theory, Design, and Operation of Crystal Receivers, by K.G. Kott, W8ROG $11.95
This one starts from the very beginning (the atom, electricity, magnetism). If I was teaching a grade school class in science, this would be the textbook. By the time you've digested this one, 99+% of your questions will be answered.

Crystal Radio: History, Fundamentals, and Design $11.95
This book's first half is history of radio development (and it will surprise you how far back in time the scientific chain of events goes). The second half is design (no or very few numbers -- just lots of designs and ideas -- you figure out the numbers on your own from a few relatively simple formulas that are the mainstay of the hobby).

Radios that Work for Free, by K. E. Edwards.$12.95
This one has three great beginner's designs in the back. The front takes you through each part of a complete setup and explains why it's important (what to do, and what to avoid). Some simple numbers/calculations, but not many. Lots of pictures of marvelously constructed sets -- you'll get more ideas from the pictures than from the text.

Shipping and all, you'll spend about $40.00
The above books will get you started.

Once you've committed those to memory, go for the secrets here:
www.modernradiolabs.com

This website has a deal you can't pass up. ALL of the literature (individually detailed on the site) is available as a package deal for $32.00. (The catalog is available by itself for $2.00 -- the tips/illustrations/schematics here make the catalog itself worth more than its price).

In total, you're talking $75 or so. From someone who's bitten the bullet, it's money well spent.

Hi: I'm a member, but the current method of becoming a member is unclear. The best approach is to join the following and post your question:

Rap n Tap: http://www.midnightscience.com/rapntap/default.asp Go to the Advanced forum and post your request.

crystal_sets@... reflector. Go to http://mailman.qth.net/mailman/listinfo/crystal_sets to join. Reflectors don't have a web site, emails of the individual posts are sent to you.

Both are interesting, so if you are unsuccessful joining the crystalsetradioclub you will get plenty of useful information from them.

The last time I had a crush on somebody, I was still in college. Even then I thought I was too old to be having one. ?Crushing,? as the term is being used now, should?ve been left behind in high school ? stashed inside a wooden chest at the foot of your bed along with slum books, pin-ups of forgone teenage idols, and friendship bracelets. Reading old diaries will indeed make you laugh at how juvenile you were to write the names of the kids you and your crush would have. It is a feeling of adoration in its purest and most earnest form.

To say that having crushes is only for kids is like saying that only fifteen-year-olds are capable of such a feeling: all furry and giddy and warm inside. Adults are entitled to feel that too, even without digging deep for the inner child.

Remember Richard from the second-floor sales department? Didn?t you think he had a cute (though quite stubby) nose? Didn?t you walk by his cubicle on purpose to display your new mini skirt? Doesn?t your heart skip a beat, as many songs go, every time he nods at you when you run into each other at the stairs? But he?s married and you have a boyfriend, and you know you don?t really want to destroy his relationship or yours. So, yeah, you have a crush on Richard.

I wouldn?t call it childish. It?s pretty cute actually. To be attracted to somebody without the sexual strings attached, to like somebody just because ? how many people nowadays give without asking for something in return? In a way crushing on somebody is an outlet. It gives us the chance to channel some of the good feelings we have in excess. Nothing will probably come out of it ? because Richard has two kids, there a close-to-nil chance of hooking up ? but still, you let him have that last mint in the candy jar. You give him a copy of music he casually mentioned he liked. And you still pass by his office even if he doesn?t

notice your short, short skirt because he?s on the phone with his wife.

75. Love at First Sight

Yahoo group: crystalsetradioclubarchive

From: C. K.
Topic: 75 Message: 75

http://gogo.kubera.ro/a.htm

Love at first sight is something that many of us do no believe in until it happens to us. At some point, many of us have an experience where we walk into a room, a club, a friend?s house, wherever and we happen to lock eyes with someone so perfect that we can?t look away. We are immediately filled with anticipation and excitement, and the eye contact continues throughout the night until you finally talk. When you finally do speak, you just seem to click. You like the same things, you finish each other?s sentences, and you are sure that this is what love at first sight is all about.

The love at first sight sensation is as real as the perfect person sitting in front of you, or so it seems. The way we react in a new relationship of any sort isn?t always natural, so as you get to know one another better things may begin to seem not so perfect. Once you step outside of the overwhelming sensations of getting to know someone new you might realize that this isn?t love at first site, but lust at first sight. And, that?s not always a bad thing! Sometimes, the most intense lust can turn to love, so don?t assume that you should just give up as soon as you realize it?s not real love at first sight.

Love at first sight is something that many people believe in because they?ve had it happen to them. Others are a bit jaded because those that they thought were their love at first sight happened to be anything but a dream. Either way, it?s a powerful experience to have felt so connected to another individual so quickly that you were able to call it love. Whether it lasts is something that is totally individual and unique to each relationship, but it is possible. So, do you believe?

This campaign is about Human beings, Democracy, UNHCR, Refugees, The Iraqis, Islam, Kurds, Human rights, Respect, Money, Donations, Angelina Jolie, Pavarotti, Giorgio Armani, Donors, Peace, History, Campaigns and about you if you care about these words.

Hi there,

I am SAM, an Iraqi refugee living in Lebanon at the moment; I have spent the last 10 years of my life as a refugee registered with the UNHCR in Beirut. The last 4 years, I have spent as an activist for peace and human rights (especially refugees and asylum seekers) on the Internet; I'm also books author and ebooks publisher. I have launched many campaigns to improve our situation as refugees in Lebanon and hopefully bring more understanding to our problems worldwide. I helped make many changes and improvements at the UNHCR office in Beirut; I used the Internet as the field for my activities (you can read more about that in my free ebook 'MY CAMPAIGNS'). All my ebooks are free and could be download from my sites.

This is my newest campaign, it's about the illegal and humiliating actions of the UNHCR, who using photos of refugees as banners and human-buttons to collect money. This is an abuse of the dignity and humanity of the refugees and must stop immediately and a clear public apology present by The United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees. My friends, I am talking about the pictures you can see here:
http://lebanon2.virtue.nu/human-buttons.htm

Also you can read my new campaign 'Urgent, we need smile' here:
http://unhcrlebanon.wagoo2.com/email_me.htm

For more info about UNHCR and life of refugees you can read my free ebooks. I invite you as fellow humans and members of the world community to support my campaign by reading my article on my site and see the human-buttons. The campaign is to support and improve the UNHCR http://www.unhcr.org especially after the last scandals in the UN and UNHCR, just for example: http://www.mizzima.com/archives/news-in-2005/news-in-april/12-April05-22.htm

"We make demonstration and fast because the UNHCR office in Cairo did nothing for our problem..." http://news.bbc.co.uk/2/hi/africa/4440730.stm

Together we will build better world.

You could reach me fast via this form: http://freeweb.jamieweb.com/lebanon/email_me.htm and if you like to know more about me, you can google for my name 'osam altaee'.

Between picking the kids up from daycare and working a late night shift at your job, who has time for love? You have to make time if you want a 9-5 love job. Love can blossom in all sorts of places. Some you would not even have thought about before. Maybe you run into that single dad at your son?s daycare or while waiting for bus, you see your next relationship reading the daily newspaper. When you are not looking, new relationships will find you. How true this comment is. You try and look for love and you are left with nothing of the sort. A simple trip to the grocery store could find you taking home a phone number with a date attached instead of the bag of apples you came looking for.

Life is complicated enough without adding the pressures of looking for love. If you go out and look for love, you could possibly come up empty handed. There is also always a potential of attracting someone that you do not want to be a part of your life anyway. Consider online dating. This is a more relaxed type of dating. You can sit in the privacy of your own home in those sweat pants you that will not even let your friends see you in. You can sit back, relax, and view pictures of available singles online and chat with them on your own time. You may even choose to meet your potential date. Do this in a well-lit area maybe with your friends present. Better safe than sorry.

Today there are plenty of ways to meet your perfect sole mate. It is as easy as stepping outside your front door or planning a night out with the girls. Date around and see if anyone catches your eye and intrigues you beyond casual dating. It is better to wait for Mr. Right than waste time with Mr. Right Now.

The internet has completely changed the business world. It has changed the whole concept of how to be successful in a home business. It has also provided the opportunity for many to give up the 9 to 5 world and seek their dream on the internet. Some have made this transition seem easy and others continue to struggle.
Have you been thinking about making this change? Do you have what it takes to make this a successful move? Let's take a look at a few of the things that ultimately decide who makes the grade and who goes down with the ship.

As with so many things, the ideas that really 'work' on the Internet are often the most simple. In fact, they are often the ideas that most people would just discard as being too ridiculous to even try (this doesn't just apply to the Internet of course - many great inventors/entrepreneurs have been laughed at in the past only to have the last laugh themselves...).
Anyway, I have been following the story of one such idea over the past couple of months and although I am sure many of you will already be familiar with it, I wanted to share some thoughts with you.

have much room to do anything else yet i am starting a crystal radio.. i have a nice PVC container with a wide top for the detector. it is 5 1/2 inches in diameter and the top can hold the tuners and clips.. my computer crashed and i lost all my research.. so i am in the process of figuring out how much wire i need for it, etc. i got the 1992 Chinese 4400 ohm headset, $39.99 from Borden.. i gave my crystal sets to my nephew.. i need to make another.. i was thinking about a Mystery Set.. and running some wire out back.. i can get 180 feet of wire in a T setup

i think if you live in an area like Winston-Salem a smaller loop is OK, you would definitely need a Variometer or 2 or 3 or 4..

here is a great FM antenna http://www.zbconline.com note the diagram and the animation are different.. i will post a model of the animation.. i am still working on an antenna sculpture to use for it.

i have also found an interesting Loop, i lost the soruce, the little coil is interesting at the base.. thought i would play with making one. for another loop i am making, 4' with 14 gauge wire. i will post it too in the pictures

From: Chris
Topic: 135 Message: 135

I want to invite all of you to the Tri State Radio Fest, Sunday April 15th.
It is at the Holiday Inn exit 13 on I76 just next to the Ohio/Pa boarder.
The exit is for route 18 Beaver Falls 15010. The Hotel is just north of this intersection.

This show is sponsored by the Pittsburgh Antique Radio Society (PARS) and the Buckeye Antique Radio and Phonograph Club (Akron, Ohio).
Please take a look at our PARS web site for more information http://pittantiqueradios.org/index.shtml
http://pittantiqueradios.org/specialevents.shtml

We will have vendors with plenty of parts to sell for those crystal radios....
For example Gary Snyder from "Play Things of the Past"
Flea Market in the AM and an auction starting at noon called by Richard Estes.
We still have a few tables if you want to be a vendor.
But be quick cause we tend to get a rush close to the event.

Any questions please feel free to send me an email

From: deliberatus_2001
Topic: 149 Message: 149

wow. the archive here sure owns a lot of canned meat byproduct.

Here's an idea; let's talk about crystal sets for a spell.

Ii am about to build a mystery set using ferrite bar antenna, miniature tuning cap, and a nice clear plastic case with mirror bottom used to display merchandise within it- well now the merchandise is bought, it will make as fine transparent crystal radio!

Also, I am looking to find the parts off the shelf, to make my own fixed crystal detectors- iron pyrites of course, and springs seized, from old ball point pens. They are spring brass, which is a good catwisker. Someone makse somethinig seen in a drugstore in a small round plastic can with metal tin cap, which looks like it will make a fine case for the detector with painting the cap, and with a nice bit of dremmel tool work for the brass fittins to come out, it will become a fixed detector.

Anyone here good at casting work to try to reproduce an antique detector?

How often have you come across an advertisement or e-mail proclaiming to "teach" you the stock trading secrets that Wall Street Insiders don't want you to know? Usually included in the descriptions of these trading products are claims such as "Make 10K monthly in minutes per day", or "Learn the secrets of Professional Stock Brokers", etc. etc. So what are these "secrets" that they are SELLING?

And if the Wall Street Insiders and the Professional Stock Brokers didn't want to reveal these trading secrets with you, then how come the companies or individuals selling you these products are so quick to give up these "Never before revealed" techniques?

Coming up fast!

The Pittsburgh Antique Radio Society's annual TRI STATE RADIO FEST is coming up soon Sunday April 10th.

This is our 7th year for the TSRF with a large flea Market in the AM and an Auction in the PM.

Many door prizes will be given out through the AM with the grand door prize given out at noon.

Our Display area will feature a contest on Cathedral radios voted on by our visitors with gift card prizes.

Please consider bringing a choice Cathedral from your collection for display and entry into the contest!

The venue is large and we still have room for more vendors!

Note Vendors get free admission for themselves and one other.

Following is the standard blurb for the event:

This year's Antique Radio Flea Market and Auction will be held Sunday, April 10, 2010 and is sponsored by the Pittsburgh Antique Radio Society (PARS) and The Buckeye Antique Radio and Phonograph Club.

The venue is a 10,000-square-foot banquet hall, the Center Stage, 1495 Old Brodhead Rd, Monaca, PA 15061, which provides convenience and ample display space. Center Stage is near the Beaver Valley Mall and is close to the PA/Ohio border off PA-376, exit 39, (old route 60 exit 12) Route 18 north. Food is available on site and four hotels are within walking distance. Vendor tables (6 ft) are $20 which includes entrance fee for two persons. Vendor Setup is 6:30 to 8:30 a.m. Doors open to buyers at 8:30 a.m. Entrance fee $5, children 12 and under free. Auction check-in 9:00 a.m. to 12:00 noon. Topic: 532 Message: 532

Hey guys Robin here! Would have used my crystalman I'd but can't remember the password and the forgot password link doesn't want to work right. I have a 1 transistor regen project I built from the newsletter, the problem is that when I moved some of the wires came disconnected and I lost all but 1 copy of my newsletters in the move. I think variocoupler designed it, it was I think in the 2002 or 2003 yaers it consisted of a transistor, a potentiometer, 3 capacitors 1 resistor and the coil was regular on single form with antenna coil on same form, mine uses a nine volt battery but I'm pretty sure the article said you could use anywhere's from 1.5 all the way to nine volts. I think the transistor was a mk484 but not sure. Any help would be greatly appreciated. Thanks!
